Last Hours and Death of Emperor Frederick III.

The Empire Mourns the Loss of Its Idol William III Proclaimed-Blographical Sketches of the Dead and the Living.

EMPEROR FREDERICK IS DEAD. POTSDAM, June 15 .- Emperor Frederick died at eleven o'clock this morning.

OFFICIALLY ANNOUNCED. BERLIN, June 15 .- The Reichsanzeiger (official organ) publishes the following announcement of the death of Emperor

The royal sufferer has ended his earthly career. By God's desire the Emperor-King, our most gracious master, passed to his eternal shortly after eleven o'clock this morn ing, after long and grievous sufferings, which were borne with admirable fortitude and submission to God's will. The royal house and the German people have been twice bereaved within a short time. They deeply mourn the all-too-early decease of our much-beloved Em-

MINISTRY OF STATE. WILLIAM PROCLAIMED EMPEROR. BERLIN, June 15 .- The Bundesrath assembled at noon to-day. Prince Bismarck, Chancelor of the Empire, formally announced the demise of Emperor Frederick III, and proclaimed the accession to the German throne of Emperor William III.

THE DEAD EMPEROR'S LAST HOURS. LONDON, June 16 .- The story of the Emperor's last day of life is thus briefly told: When Prince Bismarck took what proved to be his final leave of his imperial master Thursday, the Emperor with a great effort placed the hands of the Empress in those of the Chancelor, his eyes the while unmistakably expressing an appeal to the man of blood and iron to protect and uphold the rights of the devoted wife and prospective widow. Prince Bismarck signified in words his interpretation of the Emperor's otherwise expressed desire. He bowed low to the Emperor, then to the Empress, and kissing the hand of the Kaiser, promised to faithfully obey his mute injunction.

At midnight the Emperor was assisted from his bed and placed in a chair. The change brought a slight relief to the patient, whose respiration was labored and pulse fluttering. The members of the the Emperor's family, with the exception of the Empress, then retired for a brief sleep, leaving the taithful wife performing at the husband's bedside the weary vigil prompted by love and duty.

Meanwhile the doctors, with the exception of Dr. Hovall, who sat in a chair to the left of the bed, paced up and down the large front room communicating with the study in which the Emperor was lying. Dr. Hovall repeatedly examined the pulse of the sick man, and at one o'clock was asked by His Majesty through the medium of a note written on the leaf of a pad: "How is my pulse; are you satisfied with

From this hour there was a gradual decrease of the Emperor's strength until three o'clock, when a marked change for the worse set in. The patient's face blanched, and his eyes seemed to recede but half their normal size. The condition of the Emperor alarmed his watchers, and the members of the imperial family were summoned. Prince Henry was the first to appear, closely followed by the Crown Prince, soon to become Emperor. Both princes stationed themselves at the bedside, most of the other members of the family, who came soon after them, standing near the door.

The moribund Emperor rallied slightly after the arrival of his children, and maintained his improvement until five o'clock, when the final decline set in. From that hour to the end the sinking was gradual and steady. Last night's dispatches do not confirm the reported efforts of his Majesty to speak and write during his last hour of life. At eleven o'clock all of the dying man's family were present at the bedside. The Crown Prince stood near the head of the bed, his form erect and his gaze never once withdrawn from the face of his father. His countenance was sorrowful, yet stern, and his manner betokened full appreciation of the burden of responsibility which was rapidly being transferred to him to bear while he should live.

After the administration of the sacrament to the dying Emperor, Chaplains Persius and Roege offered prayer. All present were intensely affected. When the final moment arrived, and Dr. Mackenzie announced the end, the Empress knelt and kissed the forehead of her dead husband. The other members of the family advanced to the bedside, kissed the Emperor's hand and slowly retired, each one expressing grief by unrestrained sobs. The Empress bore up bravely. She lingered for a while after the others had withdrawn. She shed tears less copiously than did her children, but con-vulsive sobs which shook her frame and awakened the compassion of all near, betokened an agony of pent-up suffering which none could share or relieve.

The body of the dead Emperor will lie stead upon which he died, clothed in a white night-dress and covered by white bed-covering. The troops guarding the ed was the Crown Prince's ad-body will remain under the command of vance that on August 4 he surprised and Major Natzer, who was attached to the person of the dead Emperor.

After the death of the Emperor the new Kaiser, William III., instantly assumed personal control of matters within and without the castle. His first act was to order the Hussars and Uhlans attached to the castle to rigidly guard the house and grounds, allowing no one to enter or to leave without a special permit. All applications for permission to leave the palace were refused, and passes, except those countersigned by the Emperor himself, in his own hand, were canceled. Passes issued at the instance of Dr. Mackeuzie were rigidly and somewhat conspicuously repudiated, especially those which had been given to reporters. The strong cordon of troops surrounding the castle excited much curious comment and criticism both within and without the schloss. As an illustration of the transfer of power, and the new Emperor's determination to exercise his authority, Dr. Bergmann was telegraphed to yesterday afternoon to perform an autopsy on the body of the dead Emperor, and it is ru-mored that Dr. Mackenzie has made preparations to leave in consequence. It was the wish of Emperor Frederick that his funeral should be as simple and private as possible, only his immediate relatives being present. A mourning service will be held at six o'clock this afternoon over the bier in the schloss. The funeral proper will likely take place on

BIOGRAPHICAL. derick III., known first as Prince Frederick William, and then as the Crown Prince

was born fifty-seven years ago, on October 18, 1851, when Europe was shaken by revolutions, the precursors of still the old forms were beginning to give place to new. His father, then Prince William, was the second son of Fred-erick William III., who throne in 1797, the ven when the child was orn who came to be proclaimed German nperor in the palace time of day that the Prussian Princes other Prussian subjects, are taught their military duties very early in life. The Crown Prince had excelent teachers—notably Ernst Curtius; and in 1850 he became a student at Bonn, and, later on, rector. With a father so nanly and serious, yet "jovial" as one courtier calls him, and a mother so accomplished, the Prince could not fail to be well taught and trained. He was tall, healthy, blue-eyed, frank and simple, and he won regard wherever he went when a youth. In the English court his father was held in special esteem; and when, having become Prince of Prussia and heir-apparent, he was driven from Berlin in 1848, his son accompanied him to England. Although politics forbade his reception, he saw Queen Victoria —who deeply sympathized with him—and Prince Albert; and it was then that Prince Prederick William, a lad of seventeen, first saw Princess Victoria, a lively and engaging child. It was the hope of several persons that these two in after years might be united, and the hope was fulfilled. Five years afterward, in the month of September, when Sebastopol had been captured, Prince Frederick William paid his famous visit to Balmoral, to ask for the hand of Princess Victoria, still a young he hand of Princess Victoria, still a young naiden in all the "unconstraint of girlhood". The engagement was announced Septembers, 1855, and the marriage occurred in 1858.

The bride and bridegroom were heartily welomed in Berlin, and in August of the same year the Queen and Prince consort visited them in their new home. A great change was im-pending over Prussia. The then King was tricken with a painful malady, and after the royal travelers from England had returned to er shores Prince William was obliged to beome Prince Regent. He had acted in that apacity since the autumn of 1857, but in October, 1858, he was appointed Regent with full

The Regent at once set about the reform of the army, which slowly but surely brought on constitutional crisis.

Prince Frederick William, who had become frown Prince, was imbued with English opinons, and he did not conceal his views. In 1863, the strife had reached a critical stage, the olicy of the government became harsh, and he Crown Prince was so moved that he adressed words of strong remonstrance to his father. "I beseech you, my dearest father," he wrote, "not to invade the law in the way you hinted"-forcing on the country his own lews of military reform, and issuing a decree smiting the opposition press. The King vindi-cated his course, and advised his son to be autious: but immediately after the Crown Prince formally declared "the proceedings of the cabinet to be both illegal and injurious to the state and the dynasty." So far did the dispute go that the King hinted at the dismissal f his son from his command on account of a speech at Dantzic. The Crown Prince did not then comprehend the scope of Bismarck's vast policy, or discern in him the qualities which made him the first statesman of Germany, but he acted with honesty and courage and deserved In the Schleswig-Holstein war the Prince aw service on the staff of Field-Marshal von Wrangel. It was this war which brought the ong contest between Austria and Prussia to a head, and discord in Denmark proved to be the prelude to unity in Germany. The result of a series of moves and counter-moves was that in 1866, the Austrian Emperor and the Prussian King found themselves at war; and Prussia, with only one ally, sent out her armies to fight against the whole resource of the confederation. The Crown Prince was intrusted with the command of what was called the "Army of Silesia," which, besides cavalry, consisted of the guard and three corps. The chief of the staff with the Prince was General Blumenthal, a skilful and hardy soldier. The plan of campaign was that while two armies, which soon became one, broke into Bohemus from the northwest, heading for Iser, the Prince's force should emerge into the scenes of decisive action through the passes of the eastward-passes famous in the history of his great ancestor, "Friedrich II." But a line of mountain wall, forty miles long-the Giant mountains-separated the armies at the outset, and their operations had to be nicely combined if they were to form a junction. They were combined by the aid of the electric tele graph; and, being well directed, and fighting toutly, they did meet on the decisive field of

Then followed four years of peace. The Crown Prince had the satisfaction of hearing his father ask the Parliament to pass a bill of ndemnity to cover and legalize the irregula military expenditure of several years; and he probably had come to appreciate the European situation and its relation to Germany better

The four years were anxious ones for Europe yet, although war had been expected every spring, nevertheless the events of July, 1870, ook every one by surprise. The Emperor Na poleon had won a diplomatic victory at Ems when the Hohenzollern candidature for the Spanish throne was withdrawn. Not content, he allowed himself to be forced into war by the Empress and his intimate councilors; and the challenge, promptly taken up in Berlin, brought on the strife which broke to pieces, for a time, the military power of France.

It was in the campaign of 1870-1 that the Crown Prince once more came prominently before the public eye, and issued struggle heir-apparent to the imperial crown he has just laid down. Popular all over the Fatherland, he was most happily placed in the command of the South German troops, which, together with two Prus sian corps and the roper cavalry divisions made up his army. The order of mobilization went out on the night Fred rick, III. 2 the German armies were over the Rhine. It was the duty of the Crown Prince to invade Alsace, and, by passing through the Vosges, turn the right of the French troops, who were be-tween the Saar and Metz. Marshal MacMahon, with a force exceeding 40,000 men, stood in his path; but so swift and decidcut up a French division at Weissenburg on the Lauter, and on the 6th defeated and routed the Marshal on the field of Woerth. From this on to the capture of Napoleon at Sedan was almost an unbroken series of vic-

When the Emperor surrendered in such dramatic fashion, the Crown Prince attended his father to Bellevue, where the King met Napoleon. He remained outside the room during the interview, but afterward saw the fallen sovereign; and none can doubt that his warm heart melted with pity for his fate, however well it may have been deserved. When the King visited his troops after the surrender, and rode all around Sedan, the Crown Prince accompanied him, and saw much to sad den as well as rejoice his heart in those days of

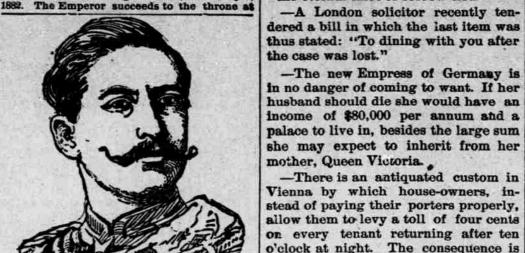

The march on Paris rapidly followed upon was invested the work of the Crown Prince was of the kind which does not show. He had his headquarters at Les Ombrages, the country seat of a rich Parisian. We get glimpses of him from time to time in his quarters and in ction, but nothing of special importance.

The engineer and fireman jumped from During the years of peace which succeede the cab, escaping with slight injuries. the war of 1870-1, the Crown Prince was engaged Baggageman McDermitt was fatally inin the work allotted tocapable men in his station; and he frequently represented the King in visits and ceremonials. Before that period he was at the opening of the Suez canal and visjured. Conductor Irwin was bruised, but will recover. Several passengers were slightly injured by flying ited Palestine. After that he went to Vienna, in debris. The engine, baggage car and 1873, to be present at the opening of the ex-1873, to be present at the opening of the ex-hibition; and subsequently traveled in Sweden, Norway and Denmark. He paid a visit to Victor Emanuel at Naples, in 1875, and attended the funeral of that King in Rome in 1878. He presided over the commission organized when the assassins, Nobiling and Hodel endeavored to slay Emper-or William, and in 1881 it was his said duty one coach were totally wrecked. MADRID, June 16 .- In the Spanish Conress vesterday Premier Sagasta formally announced the death of Emperor Frederick of Germany. Senors Canovas del or William; and, in 1881, it was his sad duty to witness the funeral of Alexander II. at St. Castillo and Dominiquez delivered eloquent eulogies upon the dead Emperor, and a resolution of condolence was passed Petersburg. On many other occasions he took part in public business, and was always ready to foster education. Iterature and art. Moreover, he wrote one or two books—one on his bassy was flooded with cards yesterday afternoon. Queen Christina telegraped afternoon. Queen Christina telegraped and a resolution of condolence was passed to the skirt. A the hammock.

The foot, and it was it is that if the skirt. A skirt which only comes to the knee is afternoon. Queen Christina telegraped afternoon. Queen Christina telegraped afternoon. Queen Christina telegraped and proper for the parents.

by which twenty freight cars were wrecked. One car was loaded with re-King of Italy, at Milan by the Duke of Aosta, at Munich by the Queen Dowager of Bavaria, and at Leipsic by Prince Bismarck and the other Prussian ministers. He rested well on the Sunday night at the palace of Charlottenburg, and attended to business on the Monday, receiving visits from his son, the Imperial Crewa Prince William, from Prince Bismarck fined oil, which caught fire from a hotbox, and the cars were almost entirely destroyed, with the greater part of their contents. Estimated loss, $5,000, on which there is no insurance. No one was inFOREIGN GOSSIP.

Emperor William III. was born in January 859, and is therefore twenty-nine years old. He -A young Madras Brahmin, marerefore twenty-nine years old. He was married February 27, 1881, to Augusta Vic-toria, daughter of the late Duke von Schleswig-Holstein. Four children have been born to them, the eldest being William, born May 6, ried, in a communication to the Indian Magazine, speaks of his marriage as "the eternal knot of sorrow tied."

THE NEW EMPEROR

First Lieutenant after he had obtained his de-

He served faithfully and was, at the time he became Crown Prince, Colonel Commander of the Hussars of the Guard. He has been as wild as any Hohenzollern, though not

Empress Augusta Victoria.

position, he was surrounded. His wife is thing to attract attention to herself except in cordance with the custom of the Hohenzollerns, the Emperor learned the glover's trade.

Henry, is a watchmaker. His sisters can cook,

A REMINISCENCE.

NEW YORK, June 16 .- The Herald pub-

had the United States declared war, i' serious Railway Accident.

morning the Cleveland fast express on the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie railroad, running at a speed of thirty miles an

the company's yard at Chartier's Station, and collided with a loaded freight car

PITTSBURGE, Pa., June 16.-Yesterday

would have been attempted.

standing on the side-track.

and are all adepts in dressmaking.

eral Grant in 1874.

appearing periodically at court ceremonials.

gree at Bonn in 1877.

serted after that hour. -Lord Bute, who is among the Emperor William III. wealthy members of the Catholic peeran earlier age than any of his ancestors. His age of Great Britain, has stated his ingrandfather, William L, of Germany, was sixtyree years old when, on the death of his father, tention of building a fine cathedral at he was crowned King of Prussia. Rothesay, Scotland, at an expense of peror Frederick III. was fifty-seven at the time over a hundred thousand dollars. His of his succession. The present Emperor was wife some time ago erected and mainre in harmony with the policy of Chancelor tains an orphanage in the same town. Bismarck than his father. He is at heart a -Good wheat land in India is abunoldier, and is so thoroughly German, that he is said to detest his own mother because she is English. At the funeral of his grandfather he railroads to become available for refused to walk with her. His hatred of the ssians is even more violent than his dislike wheat growing. The production of for the English, and it is expected that wheat in India is now only about one his rule will not be without accompaniments of war. He refuses to drink champagne because it is a French wine. His intiates have been the Crown Prince of Austria, a very dissolute young man, and Count Herbert Bismarck. He was carefully educated, receivbushels of wheat annually for the 260,ing his early instructions under private tuition. He was well grounded in the classics, lan-guages and mathematics, and was then sent to 000,000 of population.

-Steamers landing at Cabinda, a little port north of the Congo, are often he gymnasium at Cassel, where he was premet by a young white man who ap- ally on the lookout for their fore feet pared for the University at Bonn. He worked hard and was allowed but pears to be in the egg and poultry and teeth. They only used their hind few privileges. He showed a special business. He has spring chickens all feet when a man was about to mount. fondness for military history and things milithe year round, and, as they are plump but nearly every one of them had a tary. It is said of him while at Bonn that he was more fond of the soldiers' black and tender, he gets a good price for trick of kicking forward as soon as the bread than of the white bread given him. He as superior to most of his fellows in swimthem. This young man is one of Bishop Taylor's missionaries, and when unless he was wary he would receive a ming and several other branches of athletics. He was much indulged by the students of the he appears at the landing with his iniversity, who consented to produce plays chicken coops he is carrying out the a horse that, I believe, could scratch written by him. One of these plays, which was not thoroughly worthless, was "Charlemagne," being founded on historical incident. He was "self-supporting" feature of the Bishop's enterprise. laced in the First Regiment of the Guard as a

-In spite of her otherwise sobersensible opinions, the late Dr. Anna Kingsford, who recently died in London, believed that she was the re-embodied spirit of Lady Jane Grey, and often alluded to the idea. She visited have the temptation with which, because of his the Tower of London one day expressly "to behold herself" as she was. Dr. Kingsford was a brilliant woman and learned languages and history with wonderful ease.

Crown Prince, was at San Remo, he was much amused at the efforts of journalists to obtain news regarding his condition. On the first day on which his larynx was examined, after tracheotomy had been performed, he turned to Sir Morell Mackenzie and said good-naturedly: "Sir Morell, will you please close the blinds of the window which faces the Hotel de la Mediterrannee, or I am sure that the young lady journalists will see down my throat and send off an account of it before the examination is over."

-A monument to the ill-fated Flora Hastings, has been erected in the kirkyard at London, Ayrshire, near the vault of the Hastings family, in which she lies buried. The monument also By authority of William II. he assumed temcommemorates the Marchioness of Hastings, Lady Flora's mother, who empletion of the journey from San Remo to Berlin. It has been said by correspondents at survived her only six months and the German capital that his father and he were whose coffin was placed beside her not as friendly as they might have been; that daughter. Lady Flora was that innothe late Emperor resented his son's treatment of the Empress Victoria, but none of these cent, unfortunate young woman of statements have come from reliable sources. In whom a cruel scandal was set afloat. which was believed by Queen Victoria, occasioned abandonment from the His father was a jeweler. His brother, Prince court, and finally caused the death of the over-sensitive victim.

CREASING A MUSTANG.

An Invasion of Spain by United States The Skill Displayed by Texas Marksme J. T. Hill, at the present time livelishes an interview with a prominent stock agent for the Chicago & Alton. army officer, whose name is not given, in which the officer tells of a plan made by and who for many years has been en-General Grant in 1874 for an invasion of gaged in cattle-raising in Texas and Spain by American troops. The the Indian Territory, remarked to a reidea grew out of the butchery of Ryan, the filibustering leader, and nearly one hundred of his followers in Cuba. General Grant was the ranges were overrun by bands of President at the time, and he is said to wild horses. These animals were a have made every preparation for hostili-ties, in the event of Spain refusing the demands of the United States Governthem off when any one approached. ment for reparation for the barbarous execution of Ryan and his men. General As a rule they were a rough, ill-Sheridan was tendered command of the shaped set of beasts, and almost unproposed invading army, with General Meade as his chief-of-staff. Grant's intamable, so that few attempts were ever made to catch them, it being contention was to rendezvous fifty thousand sidered best to shoot them on sight veterans of the cival war, who were to be mobilized near New York, and the fleet prepared to carry them across the influence in our horse herds. Some-Atlantic in two divisions. The idea was times, however, a really fine to pretend that it was for service on the Island of Cuba, but really to land on the shores of Spain, and march inland to Madrid. Both Grant and Sheridan it. But the ordinary mode of capture. deemed the movement a feasible one, and.

animal would be seen and the ranch men would try hard to secure lassoing, could seldom be used against wild horses, and these beasts were very no weight, could outstrip a very fine animal with a man on his back. I have chased wild horses a hundred times. and have become thoroughly convinced hour, ran through a misplaced switch in of the truth of the English racing saying that the weight of a stable key will win or lose a race. "In this extremity the Texans used to resort to a means of capturing the horses which is, I believe, exclusively American. It was discovered, I do not know how, that a blow upon a particular sinew in a horse's neck, located just above where the spine joins the skull, would paralyze the animal temporarily without doing it any permanent injury. In those days the Texans were nearly covering completely in an hour or two, wife.

wound in the back of the neck that soon healed. Of course many bullets went astray and hundreds of horses were killed, but a good shot would secure about one horse in three that he attempted to 'crease,' as this mode of capture was called. The large caliber rifles commonly in use were not adapted to this peculiar mode of hunting, as if they touched the sinew they were sure to break it, and the wounds the 44 or 52-calibre balls inflicted were too severe. The weapon universally employed in creasing mustangs was the old Hawkins rifle, which a bullet not much larger than a pea, had a set trigger and required but a small charge of powder. These weapons were wonderfully accurate up to one hundred yards, allow them to levy a toll of four cents but inflicted a trifling wound, and the on every tenant returning after ten bullet was likely to take a course through soft flesh around any hard object, inthat the streets are comparatively de- stead of tearing through it, as a larger ball propeled by a heavier charge of powder would do. Hundreds of mustangs, always the best animals in the herd, used to be creased every year.

herds had entirely disappeared. "Some of the horses thus secured were very tough and fleet animals, but few were of any practical use. Nearly all were stallions, as a wild mare that dant. It only needs to be reached by was good for anything was seldom seen and the captured horses were nearly, without exception, irreclaimably vicious, even when judged from the bushel per capita. The food of the Texas standpoint. Even when East Indian is chiefly rice and millet, broken to the saddle they could but includes more than 200,000,000 only be ridden by the very best horsemen and were always on the lookout to do their riders an injury. Strange to say they seldom tried to kick, but a man had to be continurider put his foot in the stirrup, and terrible blow on the leg. I used to own himself between the ears with his hind foot, his hind leg being apparantly made of India-rubber. The instant he felt a foot in the stirrup his hind hoof would come forward with the speed of most vicious kick. I gave up mounting him in the usual way, and always enough performed in my younger days, although I would have some difficulty in doing it now. I used to like to ride wild horses, but after one or two nar-Louis Post-Dispatch.

WHERE SEALS LIVE.

The Best to Be Found in the Warm Part of the Arctic Region. "The best sealskins come from the regions." "From the warm parts? I thought the seal liked ice and snow," inquired her younger sister's good. But some-the reporter. "The fur seal," replied the furrier, seal seeks his Arctic home in the summer and leaves it on the approach of winter for wagmer latitudes. The fur seal is not very plentiful, but the hair seal is found almost every where. The value of the two skins varies-the fur seal is worth twenty times as much as the skin of the hair seal.

The inhabitants of the Arctic regions make clothing and tents of the coasts of Labrador in large numbers, estimated that not over 5 or 10 per have forgotten! cent. more sealskins than this is fur- For when they were both sick with dure the insults of this rude fellow any nished by all the rest of the world. scarlet fever, and Cora Lane, Bessie's longer, and with one bold dash kicked and thus get rid of a disturbing The American company is restricted dearest friend, sent her a beautiful his feet into the air and struck right by act of Congress not to kill more than red rose, she would not keep it by her at his bold, speckled breast. of this law has been that in a few years made mamma carry it to Mabel and ing-glass fell over upon the there will be an enormous number of insisted that she should keep it until broken into a hundred pieces. seals in Behring Sea. For some time it withered; and Bessie loved flowers they have seemed to understand the so much, particularly red roses. She law and have been coming to the could never do any thing for Bessie, shy, and even a poor horse, carrying Yankees for protection. No one who she was sure, that would be so sweet saw a seal skin in its raw state would and self-sacrificing as that, and she believe that a beautiful coat could be felt very sorry now that she had not made from it. It is an ugly-looking let her have the hammock. What was floor in a great panic when Aunt Julia affair, and the soft fur is covered over a hammock on a lovely summer day. came in. by a hard, rough, heavy coat.-N. Y. when there were so many nice things Mail and Express.

A Child's Useful Dress.

A pretty and simple dress for a little girl consists of a straight, plaited or gathered check, in Jersey cloth or bodice of the plain material, with inserted vest of the check. One yard of and how forlorn! the plain material, and two yards of the check, will make the dress, and if in a winning voice. the skirt is hemmed up will provide. without exception fine shots, and at by facing, for lengthening another fully, but kitty was purring soothingcept on foot, and it was ion in the shortness of the skirt. A the hammock. The journey of the new Emperor, attended by his English physician, Sir Morrell Mackenzie, and accompanied by the Empress and his daughters, from San Remo to Berlin, occupied thirty-eight hours, from the starting on Saturday, March 10, soon after nine o'clock in the morning, to past eleven on the Sunday night. His Majesty was met at Genoa by the King of Italy, at Milan by the Duke of Aosta at Munich by the Queen Dowager of Bayaria.

Afternoon. Queen Christina telegraped to the desired to be overcome by any such difficulties, the cowboys discovered a way to capture them. Taking his rifle, a hunter would crawl through the thick chaparral until through the thick chaparral until within fifty or sixty yards of the horse within fifty or sixty yards of the horse he desired to secure. Then, taking to say: "She is only a careful aim, he would endeavor to send child;" the woman grows out of the Taking his rifle, a hunter would crawl breaking down, instead of strengthen- decidedly, in a tone which meant that through the thick chaparral until ing, the barriers which native delicacy within fifty or sixty yards of the horse he desired to secure. Then, taking careful aim, he would endeavor to send careful aim, he would endeavor to send careful aim, he would endeavor to send child;" the woman grows out of the casily.

she did want it very much, but she wished Mabel to understand that she was not to be made friends with so child; the woman grows out of the casily.

The work is only a careful aim, he would endeavor to send child; the woman grows out of the casily.

"I'll tell you what we'll do, Besa bullet through the top of the neck so child and her character is largely as to strike the sinew. When this was properly done the horse would fall as ditions. The qualities that are not if struck by lightning and remain in- cultivated in youth will not be found in sensible for ten or fifteen minutes, re- their strength at maturity .-- The House-with no worse injury than a slight READING FOR THE YOUNG.

A PUZZLE Phere's one thing I don't understand; It really seems to me so queer That my mamma last night should say: "Be sure and always mind, my dear;"

And when I got that dreadful fall This very morning, from a chair, Should pick me up and cuddle me, And pat my cheeks, and smooth my hair;

And press her face down close to mine, That I might hear her whisper, kind-The while she kissed my tears away— "There, there! my darling; never mind?" - Vouth's Companion

PREFERRING ONE ANOTHER. Mabel's Victory Over Self, and the Good Her Loving Words Accomplished. "I choose the hammock."

"No. I want it." "But I'm the oldest, so I'm going to have it."

"I'm the youngest, and you ought to give up to me." "Well, I'm not going to this time, any how," and Mabel seated herself in the hammock with a determined and this practice was kept up until the air and commenced to swing back and

> "I'm going to tell mamma," said Bessie, in a tearful voice, turning toward the house; but as she did so she raised her eves to her mother's window where the blinds were closed and the curtains drawn. Then she remembered that in that darkened room lay mamma with one of her dreadful sick-headaches, and she knew that at such a time she must not be disturbed in any way, for it always made her worse. Bessie couldn't see why mothers always had sick-headaches. Her mamma had them so often and Cora Lane's mamma did, too. It seemed very inconvenient and uncomfortable to her, particularly now when she had a grievance to tell. If she had known of the heavy throbs of pain that beat in the poor aching head, as the angry words were borne in through the closed blinds, she might seem that taketh a city." have felt conscience-smitten, but she did not know, and she only paused and commenced boring her heel into the smooth turf of the lawn while a dark frown disfigured her usually bright little face.

She wished that she was bigger than Mabel, then she would show her what lightning, in the attempt to inflict a it meant to have an older sister who never gave up to her-that's what she would do. Bessie forgot then how used to vault into the saddle without often and how kindly Mabel yielded touching the stirrups, a feat easily to her; it is so easy to forget kindness in the face of an injury.

Mabel lay in the hammock swinging zently to and tro, apparently perfectly contented, so Bessie knew there lessly stood in front of them, I gave it in the garden, springing now and then his spelling-book leaf up and stuck to the tame stock."-St. to catch some unwary fly or grassthe kitten she took it in her arms and longed to Ben and Roy. commenced to pour her troubles into kitty's patient ears. Mabel did not feel as contented as comparatively warm part of the Arctic | she looked, for she was really a very unselfish little girl, and gave Bessie yard. They heard a great chuckling the preference far more than was for over the garden wall. There was thing was wrong that day; mamma Julia's onion-bed, digging with all his had a headache, her door was closed might, making the dirt and onion-setlikes cool weather and water, but he and her curtains drawn, and there was tings fly out from behind in great does not like ice or snow. The fur no one to set things right. It was not ruin. Two of the heas were with him. really a desire to thwart each other looking on to eatch the worms turned that had caused the conflict between up by his big feet. Ben bullooed, and the two little girls, but it was that Roy seized a long brushy stick and feeling of ruffled spirits that is known ran after them. This frightened to us all, which grown-up people call Jonah so that he scudded beneath the nervousness in themselves, but in the barn. It was a long time before h little ones is too often designated as could be coaxed out. All the hens ill-temper.

skin of the hair seal. The hide of the hair seal, which is secured off the into her mother's room and saw the he was very tame, and was as eager pale face lying on the white pillow. to run after the kernels as the hens. is used for reticules, sealskin shopping She wished then that she could do In the rush he van right between Ben's bags, etc., and coupled with monkey something to ease the pain, and she feet and was caught. Then the boys skins, they help to make a common wished it now with all her heart; but carried him into the house to give him grade of kid glove. The fur seal is she was such a little girl, and knew same bread, as they often did. gradually being exterminated, and nothing about sickness. As she looked "Let's let him look at himself," salskin is getting more expensive every down into the garden, and saw Bes- eried Royyear. This is caused by there being sie wandering about with the kitten in They took down the little kitchen no laws to protect them, and they are her arms, she wondered what she was looking-glass. It was stood up against being killed all the year round. In thinking about. Was she angry with the wall, and Jonah was put down porter: "In the early days of the cattle business in Texas, from 1857 to 1860, two limited localities, both in Behr-She almost wished she had given it up. feathers and strutted back and forth ings Sea. The catch on the American for she really did not care for it very and pecked the floor! The cock in the side is limited to 100,000 a year, much. But why should she always looking-glass ruffled up his feathers, great nuisance, as they would get and on the Russian side to 40,- give up every thing to Bessie? She too, and did exactly as Jonah did. mixed with our loose horses and run | 000. This latter is sublet to the had some rights, even if she was the That made Jonah dare up the saucy American company. Thus the whole elder? Bessie never thought of giv-cock and dance sideways. So the of the fur business is virtually in the ing up to her. And then like a flash other danced, while Ben and Roy lay hands of a single monopoly, and it is it all came to her mind; how could she on the kitchen floor and laughed.

100,000 seals every year. The result | bedside-only one little minute-but | Ah, what a crash! The little lookall about her, compared with a beauti- there was nothing to be done but sell ful, fragrant rose when she lay burning with fever in a darkened room?

"Bessie," she called, as she saw her out of mischiel.—Youth's Companion.

sister moving aimlessly about with the little white kitten still held fast in her arms. Bessie turned at the sound of flannel, and slightly full Garibaldi her voice. How small she looked among the tall dahlias and hollyhocks,

"Come here, please," called Mabel,

Bessie shook her head rather resentshort range could send a rifle ball with season. Of course it may be made in ly in her ear, and, after a moment's phenomenal accuracy. The horses cotton instead of flannel; but care hesitation, she came slowly toward not be approached ex- should be taken not to allow the fash- the big elm tree where Mabel sat in can not be established in every section > you want it." "I don't want it now," said Bessie, she did want it very much, but she sie," nothing daunted by her sister's was stolen from the stable of Ira repelent air; "let's sit in the hammock Sampson, the undersigned. I will together and make a little nest for kitty between us. I'm sorry I didn't and reliable particulars regarding the think of it before." Pussy purred funeral of the thick."

with all her might, as though she understood and quite approved the plan, and Bessie's face brightened, but still she did not move. "Come." said Mabel, who by this time had grown very enthusiastic, in her generous attempt to make peace, "you get in first with kitty while I bold the hammock."

Bessle could not resist her any onger, and the smiles broke all over her face as she ran to Mabel's side and

'No, sister, you sit down first, then I can climb in, and you may hold my kitty if you want to."

Bessie's forgiveness was slow in coming, but when it came it was whole-hearted and complete. It was the kind of forgiveness that also forgets. "

So they sat side by side, and if you have ever sat with some one else in a hammock you know how very close together they were. There was not room between them for the little kitten, so she lay across both of their laps and they both stroked her soft, white fur, while they chatted merrily together; and kitty purred softly in a self-satisfied man ner, quite as though she were the cause of this happy arrangement. And as the loving little voices floated in at mamma's window, a tender smile replaced the look of pain on her pale face, and soon she fell into a refreshing sleep, and when she awoke the headache was all gone. Mabel did not know that, in her winning action toward her little sister. she had done any thing more than bring about a very happy state of feeling between themselves, and she would have been happier still if she had known of the relief that came to ler suffering mother as she heard her loving words. This was not all, either: she had done something greater still for she had won a victory over herself. and "He that ruleth his spirit is: Nellie Helm, in Interior.

IN MISCHIEF.

Jonah and the Looking-Glass-How Ben-nie and Boy Were Helped to Remem-Bennie and Roy were left at home alone one afternoon while Aunt Julia went to the village to do some shop-

She had bidden them be good boys, and keep out of mischief. They meant to do so, and to make it the more certain, each took his spelling-book to learn a line of words. But it was such a task! The sun shone so brightly and the birds sung so blithely that they just could not study.

"Let's go out and feed Jonah," which they would use if a man care- her little white kitten walking about said Ben, making a big "dog-ear" of "Jonah" was the great P.ymouth hopper. She cast one resentful glance Rock coek that was always ready to at Mabel, then running toward eat or have a quarrel. And he be-"Yes, let's go!" echoed Roy. "That won't be mischief." Out they went to find Jonah; but he was not in the barn, nor in the Jonah, right in the middle of Aunt were there, and Ben tossed out a ker-Mabel, too, looked up at her mother's | nel or two of corn at a time, "Just to window. Poor mamma! How she did | see 'em run." And oh, how they did suffer when she had a headache! She run and scramble and push each o her!

But by and by Jonah could not en-

Jonah was seared, but in a moment, believing that he had won the battle, he flapped his wings and crowed till the kitchen rang. Ben and Roy knew now that this was mischief; and they sat on the

It was a great grief to the boys, but Juvenile Granges.

Mrs. L. S. Glassford, of Cleburne, Tex., writes the Texas Farmer that Lee Grange, at that place, is on a genuine boom, and that she has recently organized a javenile Grange among the boys and girls. We conhomes of Texas that they are thus to be provided for, and we see no good reason why the "Juvenile Grange" the children can not too early familiar with them. -The following pointed "ad" ar